

Gentlemen & Ladies of the American Society of Highway Engineers

The purpose of the American Society of Highway Engineers is incorporated in our Mission Statement.

The Mission of the American Society of Highway Engineers is to provide a forum for members and partners of the highway industry who support education, innovation, and fellowship; promoting a safe, and efficient highway system for mobility now and in the future.

The local Section/Region is the most important element for ASHE to satisfy the goals of our Mission Statement. The Section Operating Manual has been prepared to provide direction for organizing and operating at the Section/Region level. While some uniformity in Section/Region operations is essential, membership and custom difference between Sections/Regions are recognized. These become the strength of ASHE. By following the guidelines provided in this manual, essential and effective communication, both internal and external, will result.

Revisions have been made to the Section Operating Manual due to expansion of ASHE, and operating procedures as amended by the ASHE National Board of Directors.

Your input is also necessary in the on-going maintenance of this document. Comments and suggestions from the Sections/Regions are welcomed and requested.
